Customer Reviews

Each volume from the Explorers Discovering the World series looks at the exploration of a large region through two- or four-page chapters focused on individual men or areas explored. A spread typically features a few clearly written paragraphs of text, a sidebar, a factoid box, and two or three colorful, captioned pictures, such as portrait paintings, clearly reproduced photos, and illustrations from different periods. Since the only maps are decorative rather than useful, readers attempting to trace the routes of the explorers or to find places mentioned in the text will have to look elsewhere. Most of the books focus on European men, though their actions are not always shown in a positive light. While women travelers are occasionally mentioned, the contributions of nonwhite explorers and inhabitants are seldom acknowledged. South America includes Spanish conquistadors, Portuguese explorers, English privateers, and a German naturalist. Larger libraries may want to consider individual series volumes, as needed. Grades 4-6. --Carolyn Phelan --This text refers to the Library Binding edition.
