

Ebook Directory
the best source of ebook

The book was found

The Magic Lantern: An Autobiography

Synopsis

“When a film is not a document, it is a dream. . . . At the editing table, when I run the strip of film through, frame by frame, I still feel that dizzy sense of magic of my childhood.” • Bergman, who has conveyed this heady sense of wonder and vision to moviegoers for decades, traces his lifelong love affair with film in his breathtakingly visual autobiography, The Magic Lantern. More grand mosaic than linear account, Bergman’s vignettes trace his life from a rural Swedish childhood through his work in theater to Hollywood’s golden age, and a tumultuous romantic history that includes five wives and more than a few mistresses. Throughout, Bergman recounts his life in a series of deeply personal flashbacks that document some of the most important moments in twentieth-century filmmaking as well as the private obsessions of the man behind them. Ambitious in scope yet sensitively wrought, The Magic Lantern is a window to the mind of one of our era’s great geniuses. “[Bergman] has found a way to show the soul’s landscape Many gripping revelations.” • “New York Times Book Review” • Joan Tate’s translation of this book has delicacy and true pitch The Magic Lantern is as personal and penetrating as a Bergman film, wry, shadowy, austere. • “New Republic” • “[Bergman] keeps returning to his past, reassessing it, distilling its meaning, offering it to his audiences in dazzling new shapes.” • “New York Times” • What Bergman does relate, particularly his tangled relationships with his parents, is not only illuminating but quite moving. No “tell-all” book this one, but revealing in ways that much longer and allegedly “franker” books are not. • “Library Journal”

Book Information

Paperback: 314 pages

Publisher: University Of Chicago Press; New Ed edition (May 15, 2007)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 0226043827

ISBN-13: 978-0226043821

Product Dimensions: 6 x 0.9 x 9 inches

Shipping Weight: 1.2 pounds (View shipping rates and policies)

Average Customer Review: 4.4 out of 5 stars 20 customer reviews

Best Sellers Rank: #182,248 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #98 in Books > Biographies & Memoirs > Arts & Literature > Movie Directors #373 in Books > Textbooks > Humanities >

Performing Arts > Film & Television #1505 in Books > Biographies & Memoirs > Arts & Literature > Actors & Entertainers

Customer Reviews

Ingmar Bergman is perhaps the greatest living filmmaker, having written and directed the masterpieces "The Seventh Seal," "Wild Strawberries," "Through a Glass Darkly," "Cries and Whispers," "Scenes From a Marriage," "Fanny and Alexander" and many others. In this autobiography, Bergman focuses more on his personal than his professional life, offering the reader an unusually intimate portrait of a troubled and prolific artistic psyche. --This text refers to an out of print or unavailable edition of this title.

Director Bergman's memoir explores his relations with his parents and older brother, his introduction to the theater, his successes and failures and his decision to stop making films. "A reader's disappointment over the paltry detail and characterization of Bergman's wives, children and lovers--and of his films--is somewhat dissipated by the inclusion of numerous anecdotes about Chaplin, Garbo, Karajan, Olivier and especially Ingrid Bergman," reported PW. Photos. Copyright 1989 Reed Business Information, Inc. --This text refers to an out of print or unavailable edition of this title.

Woody Allen was asked by Public Radio's Terry Gross on "Fresh Air" what were the movies he had most watched in his life. One of the three he named was Ingmar Bergman's classic "The Seventh Seal." Bergman has exerted a powerful filmic influence on Allen and other directors. He is one of the most important directors in the history of film so all we can learn about him is of importance. The Magic Lantern is Bergman's autobiography published in 1986. Bergman(1918-2007) was born to a devout, strict and dour Lutheran clergyman and his wife. The parents were cold with many marital problems and conflicts in their over fifty years of marriage. His father rose to high prominence in the Swedish church hierarchy while the mother became emotionally withdrawn from the marriage. Bergman was loved by his parents but they were strict with him, his brother and sister. Bergman was a sensitive boy who was plagued by various illnesses. He loved to read, listen to music, walk and watch movies on his magic lantern projector received as a Christmas present. Bergman attended the University of Stockholm, heiled Hitler while on a visit to a chum in Germany and did not serve in World War II. He rose in the Swedish film industry making such masterpieces of cinema art as "Wild Strawberries

One Christmas, when Ingmar Bergman was 10 years old, a wealthy aunt gave his older brother a magic lantern--a low tech projector. Little Ingmar was overwhelmed by the contraption, and he traded 100 tin soldiers for it from his rather indifferent brother. That night he crept into a closet with the lantern, fired it up, and gazed in wonderment at the images flashed against the closet wall. He was enchanted, and in his memoir, aptly titled after that memorable experience, he tells us that he still is. The Magic Lantern is as intriguing as Bergman's films. Anyone who has seen his films will immediately appreciate just how many scenes in them are pulled from Bergman's own life--or at least his memories, accurate or not, of his life: the spanking scene in "Fanny and Alexander," the locked-in-a-closet scene in "Hour of the Wolf," the infidelity in "Faithless" (Liv Ullmann directed, but Bergman wrote the script), the death fear in "Seventh Seal," and so on. Bergman truly is a confessional artist. As both writer and director, his personal life, both inner and outer, is the raw material for his films. The Magic Lantern isn't written in a linear style. Memories of childhood dance with more recent ones--e.g., rehearsing Strindberg's "Dream Play" or being arrested on false charges of tax evasion. What's important for Bergman throughout is his inner life: the incredibly rich psyche that serves as the magic lantern that projects his art into the world, both on the screen and the stage. Bergman wrote his memoir after he'd "retired." He still had several films ahead of him, including what I think turned out to be one of his best, "Saraband." The themes that haunted him throughout his life, including ones that he thought he'd laid to rest involving God and death, and which he wrote about in The Magic Lantern, remained with him for the final two decades of his life. Like his movies, there is no final resolution. Perhaps that's simply the human condition.

I was somewhat disappointed after completing Mr. Bergman's autobiography. While he is very candid and confronts many of the problems we all face growing into adulthood, I found the structure of the book a bit disorienting. In one chapter he's talking about a period in the 1940's, then he jumps into a discussion that took place in the 70's. A few times I found myself questioning what period of his life he was specifically referring to. Regardless, it is worth reading!

An amazing glimpse into Bergman's mind and his influences. Paradoxically, he considered his films his "lesser" works and hoped that his stage plays would be among the great theatre pieces.

It is an excellent honest and stimulating self-portrait of a fascinating man. I would have liked images of the different personages and a more complete CV at the back. I enjoyed the fact that it was not written chronologically. It is a wonderful companion to the film Fanny and Alexander.

This book is an absolute treasure. So happy to own it.

Great biography, extraordinary man. Thank you, PAC

Very happy.

Download to continue reading...

Magic Cards: Magic the Gathering - 33 Killer Tips from a Magic Master! (Magic Cards, Magic the Gathering, Magic Decks, Magic the Gathering Tips, Magic Card Tips, How to Play Magic, Magic)
Hal Jordan and the Green Lantern Corps Vol. 3: Quest for Hope (Rebirth) (Green Lantern - Hal Jordan and the Green Lantern Corps (Rebi)
Flashpoint: The World of Flashpoint Featuring Green Lantern (Green Lantern Graphic Novels (Paperback))
The Magic Lantern: An Autobiography Wicca
Magic Starter Kit: Candle Magic, Crystal Magic, and Herbal Magic
Magic Lantern Guides: Nikon D80
Magic Lantern Guides: Canon EOS 40D
The Magic Lantern of Marcel Proust: A Critical Study of Remembrance of Things Past
Magic Lantern Guides®: Nikon D7000 CLS Flash Companion
Magic Lantern Guides: Nikon AF Speedlight Flash System: Master the Creative Lighting System! (A Lark Photography Book)
Magic Lantern Guides®: Canon Powershot G11
The Magic Lantern: The Revolution of '89 Witnessed in Warsaw, Budapest, Berlin, and Prague
CARD THROUGH HANDKERCHIEF - A Classic Magic Trick with a Borrowed Handkerchief: A Magic Trick Tutorial that explains how a freely chosen playing card passes ... a borrowed hanky (Magic Card Tricks Book 6)
The Baine Chronicles Series, Books 1-3: Burned by Magic, Bound by Magic, Hunted by Magic Native American Autobiography: An Anthology (Wisconsin Studies in Autobiography)
Lin Yi's
Lantern
Green Lantern: Rebirth
Green Lantern: Blackest Night
Green Lantern: The Sinestro Corps War
Green Lantern: Brightest Day

Contact Us

DMCA

Privacy

FAQ & Help