Jorie Johnson enjoys designing, producing and wearing her unique handmade woolen felt creations. After studying industrial textile design (weaving and printing) for fashion and interiors Jorie found her compatible expression in fiber through the traditional medium of felt making. Her combination of rich colors and layering techniques, working various materials such as silk, rayon, and mohair into the felt product, results in one-of-a-kind clothing and accessories for the discerning collector. She resides in Kyoto, Japan.

I am new to the world of felting and have yet to get my hands wet in it, but wanted a good book to learn the right way! I think I have found it in this one. The author goes into GREAT detail on everything, including many fascinating historical references. The projects are well thought out and the step by step directions look like anyone (even me) can follow them and get decent results. Thank you for the attention to detail! If any of you reading this are wondering about this as a first felting book, I would say get this one AND one of the simpler ones and you should have it made! Happy Felting!

After taking a few felting workshops and looking at numerous books, I recently purchased three books on felting. This was one of the three. "Feltmaking and Wool Magic" is well-written with great instructions and step-by-step illustrations. I am rather new to felting and feel that this book was detailed enough to help me work through the steps...but I didn't feel like the projects were too simple. The book has a nice, progressive quality as you move through the chapters. Highly recommended!!!

Fascinating projects and inspiring examples. Can't wait to roll up my sleeves.

Wonderful book with doable designs.
